

PROGRESS

“Should I Join Progress?”

“Should I Join Progress?”

What is Progress?

Progress is a group of brilliant engineers, founders of data and AI companies, megaproject managers, network builders, grassroots organisers, NHS professionals, astrophysicists, world-class educators, inventors, polling and focus grouping experts, and more.

We're united by a sense of profound anguish at the increasingly desperate state of the UK, and by our shared understanding that there is no one coming to save us, so that our only option is to save the country ourselves.

We have spent 2025 building the tooling, technology, logistical apparatus, policy, talent and personnel required to win a general election. Whatever your background, prior political affiliations, experience profile, or age, we need your help to make this happen.

What Progress Believes

Our platform is simple and oriented around our vision of A Kingdom United.

Economically, we believe in a Britain whose growth is propelled by cutting edge technology and high creativity. We believe in monumental reindustrialisation. We believe in a focus on skills and training for all, to create tracks to prosperity for everyone.

Socially, we believe that it should be the right of all people to walk down the street at night without fear of harm. We believe in a stance on white collar crime that is as firm as our stance on violent and petty crime. We believe in a Britain defined by its people, heritage and the classically British values that made this country the freest, fairest, and most successful in the world, but a Britain also open to those who believe in and exemplify those values.

And we believe in a state that serves its citizens. In courts that serve the interests of the law-abiding, not the criminal. In a civil service that is lean, cost-effective and hyper-productive. In a crown jewel health service that provides for its people whenever they need it. In a political class that isn't bothered about the political left or the political right, but is defined only by its will, its skill, and its willingness to serve.

We are a party devoted to bringing about the glory of our name: Progress, for one and all. A party that believes in the heroism, rationality, and beauty of human beings; In the greatness of Britain, and of the British people; In the magnificence of our Common Law, which forms the heart of every constitution held close to the chests of all of the freest, most successful countries in the world.

And we believe above all in our mission. It may seem extravagantly ambitious, but only the unusually ambitious can achieve extraordinary goals. We are approaching our aims with a sure understanding of the historic opportunity for a serious challenger party opening up on the British political stage, and a profound conviction that we can wait no longer to begin seizing that opportunity. We believe It Can Be Done.

You Should Join Progress if...

- You find that the words above have resonated with, or inspired, you;
- You have no faith in the powers of the existing parties to build the kind of political machine capable of gripping the chaos of Whitehall and solving the country's problems;
- You are profoundly concerned by issues like migration, state reform, corruption in local government, and policing, and wish to see those issues resolved in a peaceful, lawful, and civilised manner;
- You have unflappable faith in the power of ordinary citizens to change the world around them for the better;
- You wish to be part of a political movement that understands that there is more to the next evolution of British political culture than 200 year old notions of 'right' and 'left', and that there is a vast opportunity for a transcendent new consensus to be built.

You Should Not Join Progress if...

- You think things in Britain are fine as they are;
- You think that the problem with Britain is that the Metropolitan Consensus which has put us in this terrible state just doesn't go far enough and that, in fact, we ought to give much more power and money to those persons and institutions which have manifestly failed to use it responsibly or dutifully over these past decades of failure;

- You have any practical interest in Cromwelly, subversion or destroying democratic machinery as a means of regime change, or otherwise seizing power by extrajudicial means;
- Your conception of Britain is exclusively ethnocentric; we believe there is a deeper story to tell of a British monoculture, reasonably open to those who fundamentally believe in and exemplify our values and have scope to contribute to our national life, but which does not need to be at odds with the continuation of the British people and heritage, with their language, culture, and traditions.
- You have sympathies with violent or revolutionary methods.
